The View from the Vicarage

This time next month, my view will be somewhat different. I will have moved to my new Vicarage where the view is less spectacular, no more Cow and Calf for me. Instead, I will be able to see neighbours houses for the first time in what seems ages. From the back of our new house, we can, just, see the golf balls at Menwith Hill, far away in the distance so I will still have a bit of a connection to the Benefice.

Moving day is fast approaching but meanwhile life continues. Before we know it will be Lent, the Cream Eggs are already in shops, just in time for us to give up chocolate! And all around us our farming neighbours will soon be in full swing with lambing. (If you ever feel that your life is too busy look at a farmer and realise how relaxed your life really is).

And right at the very beginning of this month we celebrate the Feast of Candlemas in our churches. It's an ancient feast; in the medieval church it was the day when all the candles used in a church that year were blessed, hence the name. It is a feast where we celebrate the light of Christ, it really is the last hurrah of Christmas and in some churches the Crib will have remained up until this first weekend of February. So just like at Christmas when life is full of good cheer towards our fellow men and women let's try to share some light and happiness during what can be a dark and miserable month.

So, thank you all for the past two and a half years. It has been the strangest of times but with love and faith we have got through the dark days of lock-downs and are well on the way to working out how we can all live our lives as fully and safely as possible in the years to come.

I leave you with my prayers and blessings and hope you will remember me from time to time in your prayers.

Stephen

News from Norwood Chapel

Dear Friends,

I want to take a moment to wish Revd Stephen all the best in his move and new post. Your monthly articles entitled "The View from the Vicarage" have been most enjoyable and uplifting. I trust the Washburn and Mid-Wharfe United Benefice will miss your ministry and will hold you in their prayers as you make this move. May God's blessings be with you as you begin again in a new setting.

Over the past several weeks, our Methodist Circuit has been exploring the theme of flourishing . . . flourishing in God's world, personal flourishing and flourishing as God's church. Flourishing means growing and developing in a healthy and vigorous way. Another word for flourish is thrive. In this month of February where the nights are still long (but getting shorter!), the temps are still low, and the pandemic is still with us, I wonder if any of us feel like we're flourishing? Maybe our waistlines are! But what about our spirits? our sense of creativity? our ministries? Have we spent any time since Christmas nourishing our souls, doing something creative with our hobbies, or reaching out to our neighbours with care and thoughtfulness? Or maybe life's practicalities have become quite a burden and because of this, one cannot even think about the notion of flourishing.

Funny enough, scripture reminds us that even in difficult times, with God's help, we can flourish. In preparing for his departure, Jesus encouraged his disciples that they would flourish if they remained in him by obeying his words. And if they remained in him, they would bear much fruit. The image of the vine and branches illustrates how branches must remain connected to the vine in order to bring about sweet, nourishing food. Christ wanted his disciples to flourish when they were going through difficult times and especially when he could no longer be with them. He gave them instructions on how to do this . . . "Love others as I have loved you." Loving others can mean giving practical help, spending time with someone who's lonely, praying for others, being an advocate/mentor for vulnerable people, and etc. Basically, anytime we care about the needs of others, we are loving others as Jesus did.

I don't know about you, but sometimes my own problems get blown out of proportion. They aren't really as big as I think they are. Oftentimes, a new perspective is needed. I receive a new perspective when I think of others and focus on helping them in various ways. When I return to thinking about my "mountain" of a problem, it turns out in the big scheme of things, it's really a "molehill!" I think that when we can do that – see things from a better perspective, we flourish. Now it takes practice; it doesn't come naturally (to me, at least!). Being open to seeing things in a different way allows space for a person to grow and flourish.

Email: magazine@washburnwharfemidbenefice.org.uk

I encourage us all to think of ways we would like to flourish . . . in our daily work, leisure, church life and in our faith. May we find ways to remain in Christ, the Vine, so that he can help us bear fruit for the sake of others.

With prayers for flourishing, ~ Rev. Shannon

A sincere thank you to everyone who contributed to a celebratory Christmas in our community.

Thanks to clergy and lay clergy who led four special services, thanks to readers, to the Washburn Valley Choir, the choir of St Margaret's, Ilkley, bell ringers and organist – music to uplift all!

Hospitality was enjoyed with mulled wine and refreshments. Thank you to everyone who baked and contributed - dozens of mince pies enjoyed! Thanks to the carol singers and those who welcomed them.

To the talented Christmas tree decorators, creator of wreaths, delightful crafts and seasonal preserves - everyone who offered hospitality to visitors at the Christmas Tree Festival at Blubberhouses, many thanks. There were many 'first time' visitors to St Andrew's. An enjoyable opportunity for neighbours and friends to meet again.

Last but not least, to the children and everyone who participated in Journey to Bethlehem – not forgetting Molly the donkey – and her expert handlers.

A Happy and Healthy New Year to everyone

Fewston and Blubberhouses churches

The Birds in Your Garden

The British Trust for Ornithology has recently published various articles describing their work with Blackcaps, specifically those which are increasingly choosing to winter in the UK. Then, for Christmas I was given a copy of Mike Toms' excellent book "A Garden Bird Year" in which he writes about the same topic. And what happened next? The first appearance this year of Blackcaps in my garden – initially two females or juveniles with their brown caps, and then a male with his jet black cap. He's still around – and is likely to go pop soon, having spent hours each day hammering away at the suet balls.

The Blackcap is a somewhat stocky warbler slightly smaller than a Chaffinch, with a brownish grey back, males being dusky-grey below, with females and immatures a warmer buff-grey. Then there is the brown or black crown that gives them their name.

They have long been summer visitors and breeders, departing to the Mediterranean for the winter, but over the last decade or so they have been recorded more and more wintering here. Tagging such small birds is difficult as they must be recaptured to allow the tags to be read, but ringing has shown that all bar a handful of the birds which winter in the UK are from central Europe: birds which have also traditionally headed south for the winter.

Why you might ask, would they change their habits? After all, migration patterns are genetically inscribed, and a change would need a significant impetus. It seems likely to be a combination of climate change warmer winters in the UK - and our enthusiasm for bird feeding. Why fly a thousand plus miles when you can travel half that distance and be handsomely fed to boot?

BTO Garden Bird Watch observations from nearly 4,000 gardens were used in a study which showed that wintering Blackcaps are only regularly seen in gardens where supplementary food is put out, especially when it is high in fat, such as suet balls and sunflower hearts. Give it a go! You never know your luck.

Measurements on birds caught for ringing have shown that Blackcaps wintering in Britain have relatively narrower and longer beaks than those wintering in Spain, suggesting that they have adapted to a more generalist diet. Research has also shown that this

What of the future? Over time, changing environmental conditions may threaten the viability of traditional wintering areas in southern Spain, as well as making the migratory passage to the south more difficult. Any new opportunities further north will thus become even more important. Winters are also warming in their usual breeding areas in and around Germany: all that might be needed to keep them "at home" could be increased supplementary feeding in Germany, where at the moment, bird feeding is far less common.

Could our summer breeding Blackcaps decide to stay here? Migration is a perilous process. Only time will tell, but almost all our migratory birds are under pressures of some sort due to climate change so we must expect to see more of this type of behavioural shift.

If you find the lives of our garden birds to be of interest, and would like to join in and count the feathered occupants of your garden, please contact me or visit the BTO Garden BirdWatch website - www.bto.org/abw

Hooty Owl

A feathered coat of snowy white He is the angel of the night His eyes are keen, he sees it all He sits in trees and makes his call.

Small creatures please beware For Hooty Owl is everywhere Silently he flies from tree to tree Forever looking for his prey to see.

The moon was out, the stars were bright

When Hooty finally caught a sight of a little mouse running through the grass

Hooty swooped and made a pass.

He missed the mouse and hit the ground His eyesight for once had let him down So Hooty realised he needed specs

So Hooty realised he needed specs and made an appointment for some checks

His appointment done he got a pair of spectacles with anti-glare Hooty now was in his glory So now is the time to end this story!

Thank you to from "Robert", and Miss V Dunn, Leathley for sending in the poem

Gardeners Corner

After such a mild December and January it is hard to know what the weather holds in store for us over the coming months. However, there are some jobs to do! Early February is a good time to trim those hedges, well before the birds start nesting, otherwise you will have to wait until July. Fe as in February is also fe as in iron - a reminder to perk up your ericaceous plants and buddleias with a little sequestered iron.

The unseasonal weather has brought the camellias into flower early. The danger is that a frost will spoil the blooms so if a frost is likely it's a good idea to cover the shrub with fleece to prevent any damage and save those gorgeous flowers.

It is still the tree planting season, so as long as the ground is not frozen or waterlogged you can get those trees and shrubs in. Just make sure the ground is well prepared – a square hole is best, to encourage the roots to explore outwards.

Snowdrops are also aptly known as "Fair Maids of February". Once they have started to die down, clumps can be dug up and divided.

Finally don't forget to start chitting those seed potatoes, ready for planting out at Easter! I usually stand mine in egg boxes in a light frost free position – a cool conservatory is ideal.
